A STARTLING

JAIL DELIVERY.

For the second time during the administration of Sheriff Lewis in his office as keeper of the county jail, there has been a delivery of prisoners therefrom, which must cast some reflection upon the manner in which prisoners committed to his care are looked after. Thirteen of the toughest characters in all Arizona, men known to be "bad men," are this morning at liberty, having helped themselves to liberty in the most audacious manner. Billy Stiles and Bert Alvord have been in the keeping of the sheriff before. Mr. Lewis knew their reputations as "bad men," and also their ingenuity in effecting escape, and staying escaped when once out. Alvord had plead guilty to a United States charge of felony, and received his sentence, and was being held in the county jail as a witness against his old time pal, Stiles, for train robbery.

There was also two or three of the boldest kind of highwaymen, one of whom, Tom Grady, as he is known, was captured red-handed in this city, and was captured by one of his victims who was too quick for him.

The knowledge of all this required not only ordinary care in the keeping of the prisoners, but EXTRAORDINARY care, to see that justice was not cheated by their escape. The very thing which has occurred which if there was any possible way to accomplish it would occur with the desperate thugs who were confined in the Tombstone jail. Another point, is that the jail was left to the care of one deputy sheriff in the evening hours, with darkness coming on. It would further appear, also, that less than ordinary care had been observed, when all the work was done that was necessary to be done to permit the attempt being either seen or heard, as the men continued to saw their way to liberty. Less than ordinary care must have been observed when these men could have in their possession the tools with which they performed their task of self-release, and the knowledge of their presence within the jail not be known to the jail attendants.

It is to be regretted that Sheriff Lewis should have had this misfortune come to his administration of the keeping safely the prisoners committed to his care. It is particularly unfortunate that the hard characters in this delivery should have been able to cheat justice of her dues. If ever there was a band of thieves, thugs, desperadoes and general cut-throats gathered in one place, it was the very band of outlaws who this morning are enjoying their freedom, when it would appear that the exercise of due diligence might, and would have prevented the occurrence. Every person is familiar with the genial good nature of the big sheriff of Cochise county, and there are men who believe that this very excess of good nature relaxes the diligence and rigid discipline requisite in a position of the nature of keeper of prisoners. This jail delivery never should have occurred. While it may be true that a false economy prevails in failing to furnish a force sufficient to look after the safety of the community, nevertheless there will be many who will censure the sheriff for the want of proper precautions being taken, when extraordinary circumstances require it. Vicious scoundrels of the Stiles type, of the Alvord stamp, of the Grady make-up, and the sneaking Sailor Brown, suggest caution, more than the ordinary care of the petty larceny thief, or common vagrant. Surely this will be a sore lesson to Sheriff Lewis, and it is to be hoped that some kind hand of fate may redeliver these blotches on humanity safely again to the half-way house of where they belong, their real destination and future home being Yuma, where it would make Arizona feel better that they were there to spend all of their coming days. Mr. Lewis should make a searching investigation covering this jail delivery, and satisfy himself and the public that at least ordinary care had been exercised in guarding these prisoners, who, from this distance apparently found it no trick at all to place distance between them and Tombstone.

POSTPONING THE STEAL.

It is said that Speaker Cannon has so arranged the Committee on Merchant Marine as to make sure that a shipping subsidy bill referred to it will not get a favorable report. But whether this was done with an intent to kill the measure outright, or merely to postpone it, is another question.

The President, too, is solicitous about the merchant marine, but is careful not to take direct ground in favor of the bounties. This, however, is what he means, though he is too adroit a politician to handicap himself in the coming campaign by a direct recommendation that the people's money be voted to certain rich men who for years have been prosecuting a raid on the treasury to add additional millions to their great fortunes. Seeing the possibility of trouble from this source, Mr. Roosevelt is anxious to sidetrack the question until he can get elected to the presidency. He proposes to do this by referring the whole question to a commission for investigation.

There is no need for investigation, but the commission would be almost certain to report in favor of subsidies. That is the object for which it is to be appointed, and if the President's recommendation be followed it will be headed by a warm advocate of that policy.

Everybody with experience in such matters knows how dangerous are coteries of millionaires in the lobbies of congress pushing schemes to transfer millions from the pockets of the people to their own coffers. Those who are opposed to such methods of "conveyance," as the unscrupulous call it, are careful to throw all possible obstacles in the way of these raiders. Those who sympathize with them, on the other hand, though they may hesitate to avow it, are fertile in expedients to give them a chance. The ship subsidy scheme is not dead, but merely to be postponed until after the presidential election. Nevertheless, the recommendation of the President shows which side he is on.

The very thing occurred that was expected. The sheriff will remember the remarks of the Review representative to him about what has exactly happened.

It is a safe prediction that the present congress will do nothing. The g. o. p. is indeed in a precarious position for its politics, mixed with legislation.

Wouldn't it have been awful if the Alvords and Stiles, and Nigger Stevens and Sailor Brown gang had taken Callaghan and McDonald with them.

Date O'Brien will just about reach the first saloon, and then it will be off with him as a "released bird."

Wherever charity begins,
And who would strive to swerve it?
It hides a multitude of sins
That often don't deserve it.

Prosecuting Attorney Folk at St. Louis does the prosecuting, and gets the convictions all right, but it seems to be a mighty sight easier for the Supreme Court to turn the convicted loose than it is to get them in there.

The conviction of Stiles may now be safely given up. With a man like that locked up behind the bars, no loophole whatever should have been given him for getting away.

Thank goodness, the "boys" were good enough to leave our newly improved court house where it was. The taxpayers would like to have something to show for their money.

If you meet a company of a dozen or so gentlemen, looking as though they did not quite know where they are going, phone the sheriff's office at Tombstone, please.

Tombstone is still there. The gentlemen who took leave of the county jail, out of seemingly philanthropic motives, did not take the city.

The only wonder is that Alvord should have gone again. He certainly had the best of it by remaining and taking his medicine.

Good thing the "deliverers" were good enough to leave the sheriff and guards behind.

And think of the names in the bunch that got away.

What a jail delivery it was, too!

Cruel.

An Irishman's View.
"Are you looking for trouble?" demanded the angry man.
"No," replied the Irishman, "only for pleasure."

More Work For Them.
"Well," said the hollow eyed man, "I am glad the soldiers will leave the coal mining regions."
"Why?" asked the other.
"Because they will be needed to save human life at the football games."—Chicago Tribune.

Cynical.
"Faint heart never won fair lady," quoted the married man.
"Quite true," replied the confirmed bachelor, "and that proves that even a faint heart is not an unmitigated evil."—New York Herald.

When the late Samuel G. King was mayor of Philadelphia, he was walking out Chestnut street one afternoon with William S. Bunn, who had for the time being given up candidatorial poli-

"PERMIT ME TO INTRODUCE MY FRIEND," ties for weekly journalism. It was early in King's administration, and the question of negro policemen was one of general local interest. He and Bunn talked on the subject from the mayor's office, then at Fifth street, until they neared Broad, when they were bumped against by a couple of skylarking gamblers, a newsboy and a shoeblack. The dignified old mayor turned, patted one of the boys on the head and asked:

"Now, what is your name, my son?"
"Carney—Dick Carney," replied the gamblin, eying his honor suspiciously.
Bunn, too, was puzzled, but his amazement grew when the mayor turned, faced him, pulled the boy gently around and went on:

"Well, Mr. Carney, permit me to introduce my friend, Mr. Bunn, formerly governor of Idaho. Mr. Bunn, Mr. Carney."
Bunn and the bootblack gazed, mechanically shook hands and stared at the mayor, who courteously raised his hat and said, "Good afternoon, Mr. Carney," and then continued on his walk, taking up the discussion of the "force" where he had been interrupted by the collision.—Philadelphia Times.

Ostrich Feathers Fashionable.

The picture hats are not complete without ostrich plumes. They are generally seen at their best in black or black and white. The curtain effect arrived at by lace or planting of black velvet is getting less exaggerated, and women are distinctly tired of the shepherdess shape, either large or small. In reality it suits so few people and it has become too universally adopted by the multitude to be any longer considered worthy of attention by milliners.

Sheep men living along the west side of the Big Horn basin in Wyoming are protesting against the proposed enlargement of the forest reserve east of the Yellowstone park. They claim that they will lose a large part of their summer sheep range if the reserve is enlarged.

CHOICE MISCELLANY

Hard Lines For the Misogynist.
A stringent law against bachelors has recently been promulgated in one of the states forming the Argentine Republic.

A man is marriageable in Argentina when he is twenty. If from that date and till he passes his thirtieth birthday he wishes to remain single, he must pay $5 a month to the state. For the next five years the tax increases 100 per cent.

Between thirty-five and fifty the bachelor is mulcted to the tune of $20 a month. From his fiftieth year to seventy-five $30 a month is the tax; but, having reached the seventy-fifth year, relief finally comes, and the tax becomes nominal, being reduced to $20 a year. After eighty a man can remain single without paying anything.

There is a paragraph relating to widowers, who are given three years in which to mourn and pick a successor.

A man who can prove that he has proposed and been refused three times in one year is also considered to have earned immunity from taxation.

It is said that the law works like a charm.

A Momentous Sneeze.

Perhaps because an elephant sneezes so seldom or because he sneezes so loud oriental folk are very superstitious about the occurrence and believe that to hear an elephant sneeze brings good luck. The Baltimore Herald gives an account of the effect produced by the sneeze of Jumbo II. at the Maryland Industrial exhibition:

Jumbo's sneeze is like the bursting of a boiler, and it created a fairly good sized panic. The elephant began to get ready for the sneeze half an hour before it happened, and as the time for the event drew near he was rolling about in his cage, apparently in great agony. Suddenly he stopped, gave one bellow and then sneezed.

The look of perfect contentment on his face after the great event was in startling contrast to the terror seen on the faces of the fleeing people. Visitors to the exposition were running in all directions, not knowing what awful thing it was from which they were racing away.

Among the Mohammedans of the oriental and Chinese villages Jumbo's sneeze caused wild excitement. They rushed to the cage and, bowing before his elephantine highness, began praying at a rapid rate. When they finished, they explained that an elephant's sneezes are of the rarest occurrence, and the event was one of great significance to them. Elephants are susceptible to cold and catch cold easily, but it is very, very rarely that they sneeze.

Cake With Nut Filling.

Cream one pound of sugar and one-half pound of butter, add five eggs beaten separately, one cupful of sweet milk, one pound of flour and three teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Flavor with lemon and bake in layer cake pans. Make a custard with a pint of milk, one tablespoonful of cornstarch, two eggs, one-half cupful of sugar, two cupfuls of chopped hickory nut meats and a pinch of salt. The milk should be boiling before adding the other ingredients. Cook until it thickens and put between the layers of the cake while both custard and cake are warm. Cover the top and sides with icing and dot with halved hickory nut meats.
